Transaction Authority and Payment Approval

POLICY STATEMENT

Cornell’s Board of Trustees, “the Board,” formally delegates authority to designated individuals to enter into agreements with external parties that obligate the university. This is referred to as “transaction authority.” An individual must not assume transaction authority unless that authority is extended through this policy.

The Board also grants to heads of units the authority to delegate “payment approval” to individuals with related functional responsibilities. This is not the same as transaction authority. Instead, payment approval is the authority to approve payments charged to university accounts.

REASON FOR POLICY

To protect the interests and manage the risks of the university, the Board delegates authority to specific individuals to undertake transactions with external parties. In addition, the Board provides for the appropriate review of all transactions by establishing payment approval.

POLICY 4.2
Transaction Authority and Payment Approval

PRINCIPLES

Overview

To protect the interests of the university and manage risk, Cornell’s Board of Trustees has established a formal transaction authority policy that identifies types of transactions and the related levels of authority, responsibility, and accountability of those entering into these transactions on behalf of the university. The Board has delegated the authority to approve any transaction not specifically requiring Board action to the president as chief executive and educational officer of the university. In the president’s absence, the provosts exercise the powers and duties of the president.

In addition to the president, certain individuals have been delegated authority for particular transactions in line with their functional responsibilities. Individuals who hold transaction authority are referred to as “responsible individuals.”

For the list of responsible individuals according to financial levels and areas of responsibility, see appendices A through E.

♦Notes:

- In the contract colleges, transactions may also require approval from one or more state agencies, the provost, or the vice provost for Land Grant Affairs.
- Subsidiaries of Cornell and other separate, legal, affiliated organizations are not subject to this university policy, but must develop their own policy.
- This policy does not cover compensation or hiring of individuals through payroll.

The Board also requires that the president and the provosts designate within their respective academic and administrative purviews, those units to be considered “operating units,” with the authority and responsibility to establish an approval structure that will achieve appropriative review of all transactions. For a list of operating units, see Appendix G.

Heads of operating units must establish this approval structure within their units by delegating authority to appropriate individuals to approve payments. Individuals with payment approval authority may only approve payments and must not enter into agreements that commit the university. For the different levels of payment approval, see Appendix F.

♦Note: Some payments, such as refunds, do not require prior approval by someone with transaction authority.
POLICY 4.2
Transaction Authority and Payment Approval

PRINCIPLES, CONTINUED

International Entities

In compliance with Office of Foreign Asset Control (OFAC) regulations, university counsel must review proposed transactions with international entities.

Indemnification

Subject to the terms and conditions in University Policy 4.9, Legal Defense and Indemnification adopted by the Board, the university will protect faculty and staff against legal claims based upon an act, omission, or transaction that arises within the scope of university employment and in the performance of authorized duties, except those attributable to intentional wrongdoing, gross negligence, or recklessness. Because the protection does not extend to personal, unofficial, or unauthorized acts, omissions, and transactions, University Policy 4.9 must be carefully consulted in relation to University Policy 4.2, Transaction Authority and Payment Approval.
POLICY 4.2
Transaction Authority and Payment Approval

PROCEDURES, ITHACA CAMPUS UNITS

Transaction Authority vs. Payment Approval

The Board has delegated authority to certain “responsible individuals” to enter into agreements with external parties that obligate the university, referred to as “transaction authority.” Further, the Board requires heads of operating units to delegate to certain individuals within their units the authority to approve payments, referred to as “payment approval.” Individuals with “payment approval authority” must not enter into agreements with external parties, as that is transaction authority. Transaction authority directly relates to only a few individuals at the university. Therefore, administrators will refer more often to procedures relating to payment approval, which most directly affect operations at the unit level.

Delegating Transaction Authority

The Board has delegated transaction authority to the president as chief executive and educational officer of the university to approve any transaction with external parties that does not specifically require Board action. In the president’s absence, the provost exercises the powers and duties of the president. In addition to the president, certain individuals have authority for particular transactions that relate to their functional responsibilities. See financial levels of transaction authority, Appendix A.

These individuals must complete adequate review of proposed transactions before committing the university.

Additionally, these individuals are responsible and accountable for determining whether:

- The transaction complies with all applicable laws and university policies, as well as sponsor, donor, or any other restrictions

- Any real or apparent conflict of interest exists on the part of the individual or organization involved in a transaction, as provided for by University Policy 4.14, Conflicts of Interest and Commitment. Where such a conflict exists, the individual must resolve the issue before entering into the transaction or contract

Delegation Plan

Responsible individuals must provide biennially, or when organizational changes necessitate, a written delegation plan identifying other responsible individuals with related duties to whom they have delegated transaction authority.
POLICY 4.2

PROCEDURES, ITHACA CAMPUS UNITS, CONTINUED

At the Ithaca campus, this delegation plan must be presented to and approved by the president or provost, with a copy of the approved plan sent to the University Controller.

For the list of responsible individuals according to levels and types of transactions, see appendices A through E.

Delegating Payment Approval Authority

The head of each operating unit established by the president and the provost must formalize and delegate payment approval authority to appropriate staff within the unit. This is not the same as transaction authority. The operating unit must update payment approval authorities on a timely basis, and notify the Division of Financial Affairs of any changes.

Individuals Who Approve Payments

The individual who holds payment approval authority authorizes a payment from a university account. This individual is responsible and accountable for determining whether:

- He or she has the authority to approve the dollar value of the payment
- Where required, institutional review and approval has been obtained before a commitment, agreement, or contract is signed between the unit and a vendor
- The transaction complies with all applicable laws and university policies, as well as sponsor, donor, or any other restrictions
- Resources have been allocated or are otherwise available within regularly approved budgets, special appropriations, or restricted or delegated accounts
- The type of payment is appropriate for the source of funds
- The payment has not previously been made and is not being held intentionally
- Goods or services have been received

For levels of payment approval, see Appendix F.

PROCEDURES, WEILL CORNELL CAMPUS UNITS

| Transaction Authority vs. Payment Approval | The Board has delegated authority to certain “responsible individuals” to enter into agreements with external parties that obligate the university, referred to as “transaction authority.” Further, the Board requires heads of operating units to delegate to certain individuals within their units the authority to approve payments, referred to as “payment approval.” Individuals with “payment approval authority” must not enter into agreements with external parties, as that is transaction authority. Transaction authority directly relates to only a few individuals at the university. Therefore, administrators will refer more often to procedures relating to payment approval, which most directly affect operations at the unit level. |
| Delegating Transaction Authority | The Board has delegated transaction authority to the president as chief executive and educational officer of the university to approve any transaction with external parties that does not specifically require Board action. In the president’s absence, the provost exercises the powers and duties of the president. In addition to the president, certain individuals have authority for particular transactions that relate to their functional responsibilities. See financial levels of transaction authority, Appendix A. Individuals with transaction authority, i.e., “responsible individuals,” must develop, implement, and maintain policies and procedures to secure the university’s financial, legal, contractual, and other interests in relation to those transactions for which he or she is responsible. These individuals must complete adequate review of proposed transactions before committing the university. Additionally, these individuals are responsible and accountable for determining whether: |
|  | • The transaction complies with all applicable laws and university policies, as well as sponsor, donor, or any other restrictions |
|  | • An assessment has been made of the likely impact of the transaction on other elements of the university and the broader community, and appropriate consultation has taken place with constituencies that might be impacted by the transaction or contract |
|  | • Any real or apparent conflict of interest exists on the part of the individual or organization involved in a transaction, as provided for by University Policy 4.14, Conflicts of Interest and Commitment. Where such a conflict |

exists, the individual must resolve the issue before entering into the transaction or contract

Delegation Plan

Responsible individuals must provide biennially, or when organizational changes necessitate, a written delegation plan identifying other responsible individuals with related duties to whom they have delegated transaction authority.

At the Weill Cornell campus, this delegation plan must be presented to and approved by the provost for Medical Affairs, with a copy of the approved plan sent to the Finance Office.

For the list of responsible individuals according to levels and types of transactions, see appendices A through E.

Delegating Payment Approval Authority

The head of each operating unit established by the provost for Medical Affairs must formalize and delegate payment approval authority to appropriate staff within the unit. This is not the same as transaction authority. The operating unit must update payment approval authorities on a timely basis, and notify the Finance Office of any changes.

Individuals Who Approve Payments

The individual who holds payment approval authority authorizes a payment from a university account, typically through the purchasing or accounts payable system. This individual is responsible and accountable for determining whether:

- He or she has the authority to approve the dollar value of the payment
- Where required, institutional review and approval has been obtained before any agreement is made or contract signed between the unit and a vendor
- The transaction complies with all applicable laws and university policies, as well as sponsor, donor, or any other restrictions
- Resources have been allocated or are otherwise available within regularly approved budgets, special appropriations, or restricted or delegated accounts
- The type of payment is appropriate for the source of funds

♦ Caution: The “threshold” above is defined as the aggregate expected expenditure through the entire period of the contract between the unit and the vendor.

♦ Note: The Board has authorized energy purchases at the Ithaca campus for up to $36 million per year with a total cost not to exceed $180 million on a rolling five-year term.

♦ Caution: Transactions related to gifts, real estate, sponsored projects, and capital projects might require approval by the Board or one of its committees. The responsible individual(s) must secure approval for all such transactions in accordance with Board of Trustee legislation. For a list of authorized individuals and functions in relation to categories of real estate and facilities projects at the Ithaca campus, see appendices C, D, and E.

◆ Notes:

- The Cornell University Real Estate Administrative Plan (January 20, 2011) contains a specific delegation of authority for real estate transactions, including delegations to the office of the Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer or its successor positions. The office of the Vice President for Financial Affairs and University Treasurer is the successor position to the office of Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer.

- “Non-investment real estate” is any real estate that is not acquired or held primarily as an investment, including the following:
  - Properties acquired or held primarily as a land bank for future educational needs
  - Institutionally significant properties not presently in academic use
  - Properties acquired or held primarily to protect other university holdings

If a project is not in the approved Capital Budget, it must first be approved and added to the annual Capital Budget, with variance approval as described in II. and III.

◆ Note: If the project is already included in the approved annual Capital Budget, proceed to IV.

II. a. For projects up to $2 Million
Authorization to design, construct, or other major implementation phase

1. $250,000 to $500,000† | Vice President for Facilities and Campus Services |
2. $500,000 to $2 Million† | Vice President for Budget and Planning |

III. b. For projects greater than $1 Million†

1. Authorization to conduct feasibility; other pre-design; pre-implementation or institutional planning study for projects anticipated to cost $2 Million or more or which have a broad campus impact | Vice President for Facilities and Campus Services and Vice President for Budget and Planning as delegated by the Provost |
2. Authorization to design, construct, or other major implementation phase | Capital Funding and Priorities Committee |

Once the project is in the approved annual Capital budget (by either annual board or variance approval):

IV. Authorization to conduct feasibility; other pre-design; pre-implementation or institutional planning study for projects anticipated to cost $2 Million or more or which have a broad campus impact | Vice President for Facilities and Campus Services and Vice President for Budget and Planning as delegated by the Provost |

V. Authorization to design, construct, or other major implementation phase

a. $250,000 to $500,000† | Associate Vice President of Engineering and Project Administration, Director of Capital and Space Planning |

b. $500,000 to $2 Million† | Vice President for Facilities and Campus Services and Vice President for Budget and Planning |

c. $2 Million to $10 Million† | Capital Funding and Priorities Committee |

† Any project that falls within this level of cost, lies within the “core campus” and the Cornell NYC Tech campus, and in the opinion of the Vice President for Facilities and Campus Services, will significantly change the outward appearance of a building or an area will come to the Buildings and Properties Committee for approval of the design.

* Includes a description of the functional program to be satisfied, a general description of the scope of construction, citation of the key project schedule milestones, and the major components of a preliminary budget. For new structures, concept approval might also include review of criteria for the placement of the structure upon a site.

 Design approval includes a review of the schematic or design development documents that illustrate the layout, massing, and exterior appearance of the facility within the context of its site. Also included is an updated planning budget based upon a refined definition of the project scope and delivery schedule.

 Construction approval authorizes construction of the final project scope defined by the construction documents and specifications.
